Review/ Renewal of limits:

Working capital limits that are sanctioned to borrowers are renewed once in 12 months. Information that is required from the borrower (such as audited financials, estimated financials for the current year, orders on hand, etc) to renew the limits is sought prior to the renewal. In cases where the borrower has not finalized the audited financials for the previous FY, the provisional financials are obtained from the borrower in order to renew/ enhance limits. Midterm review of limits sanctioned to borrower is also done in order to re-assess the credit requirement of the borrower, which may have changed during the course of the year.

In addition to the various steps taken to establish borrower's credit worthiness at the pre-sanction stage, we monitor the health of the account on a continuous basis at various levels. At periodic intervals, we obtain stock statements from customers and observe the position of stocks and receivables for Cash Credit borrowers. Unit inspections are also done multiple times in a given year. We also use analytics in order to study the transactions of the borrower in order to obtain early warning signals on the health of a particular account. Early warning signals are also monitored at a portfolio level.
