

Das addressing an India Today event here said in the first quarter the government expenditure, which has a major role in GDP numbers, was very low due to the elections, pulling down the growth numbers to some extent.

"From the second quarter government expenditure has been picked up. So second quarter numbers will be hope-due to conflicting signals in the economy. One month the PMI goes up, the next month it goes down. The IIP numbers have also been going up and down." So, there are various other datapoints on which you build your estimates that go in conflicting directions and giving conflicting signals and that makes the task more complex," he explained.
